BIOGRAPHY

The American Pierce Warnecke, more known as being part of the duo Nth Synthesis, sculpts numerical material since his computer-assisted music studies at Boston's Berklee College of Music.

Attracted at the same time by the work of the image and the sound, he develops with his own modules and forges his own material by controlling each subtlety. Pierce takes as a starting point the interactions between men and machines, which gives him this ambivalence between the emotions and poetry of Electro and the precise details of Idm.

During the last two years he has been giving numerous concerts in the United States, France and Germany. Its first EP will be finally released on October 7th 2009 on BEE Records.

THE ELECTRONIC HEART

The Electronic Heart, a machine integrating human characteristics or a man assisted by the machine? This EP comprises six tracks charged with numerical emotions and full of electronic spasms. It is a game of proportions, the basis for Pierce Warnecke's music.

The EP opens up to the punchy electro of And then Blood Poured from her Lips, a cross between chaotic energies and melodious emotions.

The technoid electro of Used Romatricks is the exploration of a happier, even optimistic, universe, while Pre-Sleep Instants and RnBeast feed on robot-like complaints in form of chilling electronica. Pierce Warnecke seeds his material like a print of today to carry us towards the electronica, electro, and Idm music of tomorrow.
